

RESULTS CHAINS 'TRAFFIC LIGHT' RATING

An example of the 'traffic light' rating in practice^{xxv}

Teams are encouraged to use their results chains as visual aids to discussions, utilising colour-coding to highlight 'sticking points' and talk through issues with and resolutions to the current cause-and-effect logic. The colour-coding tasks teams with finding out the reasons 'why' there are red boxes, and to unblock them by coming up with alternative strategies and means of working with partners – or to realise where there have been unintended consequences of their work.
